

Dear Employer,

At the National Healthcareer Association (NHA), our goal is simple – making the healthcare industry better, one worker at a time. We believe strongly that all health professionals, regardless of role, should be well-trained and qualified to care for patients. Consequently, we are committed to helping organizations like yours find and employ those professionals and ultimately enhance your standard of care. At the same time, we are committed to supporting the candidates who achieve NHA certifications in finding the best jobs possible to utilize the skills demonstrated by their certification.

Established in 1989, NHA is now the nation’s largest healthcare certification provider, and recognized as a leader in the field. To date, we have helped nearly 270,000 candidates become certified in 10 allied health fields including:

Phlebotomy Technician	Pharmacy Technician	Billing and Coding Specialist
Clinical Medical Assistant	Medical Administrative Assistant	Operating Room Surgical Technician
Patient Care Technician	Electronic Health Records Specialist	Medical Laboratory Assistant
EKG Technician

NHA offers testing at more than 500 proctored test sites as well as accredited schools nationwide, and our certifications are turned around in approximately one week – faster than any other certification company. This allows employees to begin working more quickly, without a lag time waiting for a certificate. We provide candidates and employers a dedicated service team including a certification consultant and customer account manager.

NHA is not affiliated with any one association, but rather we work with numerous healthcare, educational, state and professional entities, individual practitioners, employers, accreditation bodies and other stakeholders to ensure our certification tests adhere to rigorous quality standards. Our tests are consistently refreshed and updated to ensure that candidates are tested and challenged on the latest in industry practices. As a service to our clients, we offer certification verification at no charge. Employers can quickly and easily validate employee or candidate certification at www.nhanow.com/verify.

Candidates who earn our certification have demonstrated a level of knowledge to competently practice in the healthcare profession. They must meet all exam prerequisites and pass the exam to receive an NHA certification. Employers recognize that NHA certification exams – four of which are nationally accredited – are extremely in-depth and comprehensive. Consequently, given that breadth of content, many employers consider a candidate’s NHA certification as a positive indicator of their competence. In addition to our certification products, NHA also offers continuing education credits to help professionals meet requirements to keep their certifications current.

While our focus is on allied health certifications, we partner closely with our sister company, ATI Allied Health, to provide comprehensive and customized learning systems, personalized support, and a preeminent e-learning and remediation program. This powerful combination of training and certification means colleges, healthcare career programs and employers around the country turn to NHA and ATI for both their training and certification needs.
